Horn, Truck and Tractors

Alvin Foerster a hustling young farmer of Lincoln believes in buying. He also believes in improved machinery on the farm, as well as helping out the country in other ways. This summer Alvin purchased a truck, later he purchased a bass horn costing $250 to play in the Giddings band and trades day he drove a new Fordson tractor home. Go to it, young man, too many people have made their money in Lee County and have moved to other parts and helped build up other sections of the state, but you believe in Lee County and the News ventures the assertion that you won't be spending money soon for railroad fare looking for a better place.
