

The Giddings News

February 20, 1931

J. R. Folkes is confined to his bed this week, suffering from a broken leg. He was on his way to Brenham last Thursday when he met a cotton truck. In giving the road, he turned too far to the right, and in going off the concrete lost control of the car. It turned over, breaking a small bone below the knee cap and scratching him about the head. He did not know if he hit a shoulder or a low place when he turned off the concrete.