

The Giddings News

August 26, 1932

DEPRESSION OVER

Lewis Foster took to the highways this week, selling the harvest hat which he sold during former years when times were better. He has been "off" of the road job during the tight times because he said there was nothing in it then, but now that times have become better, he is again on the road. He keeps in direct touch with sales conditions, and his judgment in such matters is good, so much so that he is optimistic now.