

The Giddings News

August 5, 1932

PAINFUL ACCIDENT

Gus Jaehne was coming from the country Friday night of last week when his fender was dragging on a tire. He stopped on the bridge which is known as the viaduct and felt of the tire to see if it was becoming too hot. As he put his hand on the tire, the car was in slight motion and his hand was caught underneath the fender, mashing the fingers severely. He was able to remove his hand before the fingers were broken.