

Giddings Clinic Serves In Training Of Rural Doctor

Dr. Fred Korkmas, a native of Tyler, Texas, is connected with the Mantzel Clinic for a training period of which will last until about the middle of March.

He is a senior medical student of the University of Texas, who has completed all of his studies and practical work in John Seally Hospital at Galveston and has been assigned to Dr. S. W. Mantzel at Giddings to get acquainted with the problems and advantages of practicing in rural and small town areas of Texas.

Dr. Korkmas is a former registered pharmacist, who entered his studies for the medical profession. He will complete his examinations after the completion of his tour of duty at Giddings and then will serve an internship at the Kansas City Hospital in Missouri beginning in June.

Dr. Mantzel is listed in the agreement bringing Dr. Korkmas to Giddings as an instructor by the University of Texas Medical Branch.
