A Hard Crash

Herbert, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mueller lost control of a truck and it crashed through the two stone gate posts at Mrs. Fletcher's residence, throwing one post against the gallery and knocking out a gallery post and some banisters. The car was only slightly damaged, and the boy was not injured, only that he lost his breeches in some manner unknown to him. He was driving by the Presbyterian church toward town and was going at a good clip and as he reached the intersection of the streets, he could not control the car on account of an oil-cloth having dropped over the pedals.
