Another Lee County Boy
Making Good

Saturday Henry Rippel drove up in front of the News office and rushed in to greet the editor. He was nominated in the July primaries as county superintendent of Austin County and he wanted to tell us of his good fortune as he was formerly a teacher at Dime Box where his father still lives. Henry is enthusiastic and thorough and there is no doubt but that his administration will redound to the good of the schools of Austin County. He has numerous friends in Lee County who are glad to hear of his success and wish him well, and none are prouder of the fact than one of his co-workers, the editor.
