A Good Farmer

Ernst Schkade of Lincoln and Giddings, besides having many other interests, is a good farmer. This year, he helped Ollie York in running the York farm near Loebau, one of the finest bodies of land in Lee County. They gathered fifty bales of cotton and have much corn and feed stuff. Mr. Schkade is a strong believer in pure and undefiled WORK as well as in other ideas about farming, such as the use of the tractor on the farm. He also thinks that if you want to stop cotton worms, put on poison, beginning at three o'clock in the morning, because he saved some cotton patches this year when the worms stripped other fields.
