

The Giddings News

September 7, 1923

Fred Seelke returned Saturday from Port Arthur where he was employed. He had a series of misfortunes since his entry into the world for himself; he mashed two toes which were later amputated, and then he underwent another operation for something similar to appendicitis. He is just out of the hospital.