BACK TO LEE COUNTY

Chas. Woelfel who has been farming near Three Rivers the past several years, was in Giddings Saturday. He called on the editor to say that his Giddings News could soon be changed back as he was coming back home. He will live with his father, Gus Woelfel near Loebau. Charlie says he made 14 bales of cotton this year, which is more than he expects to grow here in the next ten years, but he is coming back to Lee County to raise a living and not to make money. He says the present price of cotton makes the cotton farmer on fine land too poor, as it costs too much for labor hire when chopping and picking and there is nothing left for the grower. He says he can make a living for his family here, and he does not expect to make any money, as that is a thing of the past for the cotton farmer. The News is glad to welcome Charlie and family back as he is a hustling young farmer and believes in his home county.
