BLUE NEWS

Blue was visited this last week with an abundance of rain. I am sure we people of Lee County can say we have a nice season for a crop, and the rain is especially good for land already broken. Farmers of this section have been set back on account of rain.

A few people around Blue report their tomatoes coming up. I have also learned that a few farmers are preparing to plant cantelounes for market. They hope to be in connection with the Bastrop County farmers, while the majority are very much interested in tomatoes which will be marketed at Lexington.

The bulking of terraces for land is making our farmers here more busy. Let me repeat, "a stitch in time, saves nine." Many farmers are busy doing this in order to save their land from summer rains and floods.

They took well on the Stolz place 1 1/2 miles southeast of Blue has good indication for what this spring. The workmen have been busy this past week setting engines for which they say they say they want to bring in all soon. Much activity is thrilling Blue with happy faces.
