

Grassyville News

The county agent, Mr. King and Miss Sanders, accompanied by our genial county school superintendent, Fred G. Haynie, came out to Grassyville school house a few weeks ago, soliciting members for The Corn, Poultry and Canning Clubs, and secured some members.

Otto Steinbach has already brought home his fine seed corn, and will soon have his land well prepared for the planting.

If a boy can, by intensive cultivation, raise as much corn on one acre of land, as his father can raise on two acres by the ordinary method of cultivation, why not urge the boy to cultivate his acre well?

By all means let the boys join the Corn Clubs, and let the girls join the Poultry and Canning Clubs, and they will thereby learn better methods of farming, poultry raising, and canning, and will develop into wide awake progressive citizens—the citizens to raise this county out of the time worn ruts, and bring prosperity.

The farmers of this vicinity have about all their land broken, ready for planting corn, just as soon as the expected cold wave has come and gone. When that cold wave strikes, a few more porkers will be slaughtered to finish filling the vacancies in the smoke houses.

As soon as the corn is all planted, our farmers will dip their cattle in the brand new dipping vats on John Dunks and Paul Berger's lands. These two public spirited, and up-to-date farmers deserve especial thanks, for their untiring efforts to get these vats built.

There was at least one happy young man in our community this past week. Reference is made to Joe Miertschin, who celebrated his seventeenth birthday by an enjoyable party Saturday night, given by his father and mother at their hospitable home. Joe was the recipient of several nice gifts, among others was a beautiful Player Piano, which he no doubt appreciates very much, as he is quite fond of music.

The Grassyville Methodist Minister Rev. Vetter still preaches good sermons, and influences the members of his congregation to attempt to do their best along religious lines.

Mr. Greschel has added another building to his blacksmith shop plant.

Grassyville seems to have adopted the motto "Progress."
