

The Giddings News

November 25, 1921

Milam County has been having her troubles all her own. They had some difficulty in preventing their dipping vats from being dynamited and some Texas Rangers were stationed in the county and all was quiet in Milam. Last week the county came very near dividing itself over the establishing of a bridge for the southern part of the county. The bridge was refused at first and the southern part threatened to secede with Thorndale, Rockdale and Gause and establish a new county. But the county judge finally rescinded his vote and the bridge was granted.