TANGLEWOOD

School Trip

The teachers and pupils of the Tanglewood school enjoyed a most pleasant and educational trip to Austin recently. They first visited the Blind school. They saw the children making curtains and some of them were studying and some reciting. Then they saw a blind girl play the piano and organ. After this they went to the Capitol. They enjoyed looking at the pictures of famous men and statues of Stephen F. Austin and Sam Houston. They visited the House of Representatives. They went from there to the Governor's Office and he shook hands with all the children. Next they visited the Senate. They were impressed with the quite dignity of this place. Coke Stevenson was speaking. Then they visited the grounds and were very much thrilled by all the things they saw.

They went to Barton Springs for lunch and this was a beautiful sight to most of the children. After resting they visited the Deaf and Dumb School. Then they went to Governor's Mansion. They saw Sam Houston's bed and other old pieces of furniture. They also visited the Airport.

This trip was a grand trip for children and they learned more than they would in a week of school.
