

Charles Bernhard (C. B.) Hohle
by Lydia Winkler and Elmer Hohle

In World War I Our Dad, Charles Bernhard Hohle, served over in France. He worked at a Hospital where they brought in wounded soldiers and other injuries till he couldn't take it no more - so later he took a job working in the kitchen washing dishes etc.

But while he was working at this hospital, there was a nurse - Dad talked about her to his dying day. [Elmer Hohle, his youngest son, always felt he had fallen in love with her.]

After the war ended, she went out in the battle field to see if she might find still alive, wounded soldiers. While out there, someone mistook her for a [German spy - they didn't know the war had ended - and shot and killed her.

This nurse, her name was

Edith Carvell

My father named our firstborn sibling Edith!
