VISITED THE HOME TOWN

Walter Cox of Kansas City, Mo., visited his old home town Wednesday and called on the editor. He is claim agent for the Railway Express Company with headquarters in K. C. and he travels over the southwestern states in his duties. He started out with the express company in 1897 as an express messenger over the M-K-T Lines and will soon reach the age of retirement which he doesn't want. He says he and his mother moved from their farm near Giddings, to town exactly 50 years ago this month where he attended school until he went to work. His first job of local work was on the present Giddings News building which was put in place after the first building for the publication was destroyed by fire one hard rainy night in the early '90's.
