SMALL POX PATIENT RE-LEASED AND OUT AGAIN

Quite a stir went over town a few weeks ago when it was heard that Prof. McBride had the small-pox. It came as a thunder-bolt out of the clear sky and why and how he came in contact with such remains as much a mystery now as when he first took it. Of course the Dr. put him and his family under strict quarantine and the school had to arrange to get along as well as possible under the circumstances while the Professor and his wife, who is also a teacher in the High School, were detained at home. He got along very nicely using every precaution assisted by the Dr. and is now over the confinement and is out again. However, it is said their little baby now has it which will detain Mrs. McBride at home another three weeks, but the Professor, using the old expression "has done left home" for the time being, and is now stopping with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ramsey. The baby while it is said only has a very mild attack, of course such will call for the closest of attention and no doubt Mrs. McBride will feel her competency as a nurse when she gets through with the second case, and especially so, if she is able to nurse two cases and with her careful nursing and using every precaution, be able to avoid taking such herself. Prof. McBride and his family have the sympathy of their many friends during their confinement at home, but in this instance sympathy is about all that can be extended, or they would expect, unless the situation develops that would naturally demand outside help when then others would have to lend a helpinghand.
