

Wedded at Austin

The News in chronicling the social events feels that it is expressing a tone of unanimous happiness on the part of the legion of friends of the contracting parties when it announces the wedding of Mr. J. S. Hillsman and Mrs. Annie Johnson Campbell.

The ceremony took place Saturday of last week in Austin at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Villines, sister of the bride, Rev. Burr of Giddings uniting them in marriage. Exactly at the stroke of eleven o'clock, Mrs. J. M. Johnson began the wedding march. The bride and groom, preceded by the minister, entered the spacious parlor where a company of relatives and old-time Giddings friends had assembled.

Mrs. Johnson accompanied the ceremony with soft music and the preacher joined them with a simple but beautiful ring ceremony. The bride, always an attractive woman, was at her best, dressed in a steel-gray wedding gown and with a bouquet of roses and lilies at her waist—she was beautiful. The groom,—well, he was supremely happy, and that's enough said.

Thus, two of the oldest families of Giddings have become united, the Hillsmans and the Johnsons. Mr. Hillsman has long been prominent in business and banking circles and Mrs. Campbell has for a number of years been one of the public school teachers of Giddings. They are now "at home" to their friends at the Hillsman home.

The News joins a wide circle of friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous voyage on their matrimonial sea.

Among those in attendance at the wedding were many former Giddings residents now residing in Austin; Dr. and Mrs. Guffin, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schubert, Mrs. W. E. Williams, Garwood Bowers and others.
