Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Stockton received a card last week, mailed at Paris, France, November 5, from their son Jim, stating that he was making preparations to sail for home. Jim enlisted during the first part of the war and continued his services throughout the conflict. Upon receipt of his discharge he offered his services to the American Red Cross in France, in which capacity he served for three months. After that time up to the date of his departure from France, he was employed by Miss Annie Morgan, of New York, who is doing relief work over there.
