THERE JUST LIKE HERE

M. E. Suehs returned Sunday from a trip to California where he visited his son Dr. Paul Suehs in San Francisco. He says conditions there are just as they are here with many people out of work and times tight. Fruit is rotting in the orchards, allowed to go to waste because the growers belong to the fruit exchange and they prorate the amount that is put on the market. If a farmer belongs to the exchange, he is permitted to market less than half his crop and the rest goes to waste. Some orchards are being dug up Mr. Suehs says. They need to stop waste by putting their fruit on the market and let others who are hungry buy some cheap fruit.
